Hackatoa it!

After analyzing and discussing the experience, we found that a simple and dynamic onboarding solution, that involved the participant since the subscription until the team definition is a gap that could bring new people to the event, and better the performance of hackathons.

It's a simple solution where the information will be easily displayed, the doubts will be quickly answered allowing the development to start as soon as the hackathon start. Decreasing the time spend trying to understand how the event works, and putting together a team.

Among the frequently doubts, almost 80% are about the event, how it works, what is needed to participate, and so on.

Other answers over the form also indicate that the alignment between the participants and the event usually is slow, confuse and unintuitive.

We associate these factors with the difficulties we went through as a team at the event, to situate us and start the development.
